Great Wealth Transfer & Implications for Philanthropy

The Lehigh Valley Community Foundation held its Spring 2022 Board of Associates meeting on June 2nd. It was a welcomed return to in-person interactions and the energy created when over 60 people gather for good conversation and good company. Erika Riddle Petrozelli, LVCF President and CEO, provided an update on the Community Foundation’s new strategic plan titled “Growth Through Partnership,” which will be released to the public this summer and discussed in more depth in our next issue. She introduced one of the primary strategic initiatives, “Nurturing Place-Based Philanthropy,” as it relates to the keynote presentation for the morning: The Great Wealth Transfer. R. Nicholas Nanovic, Esq., Partner and Chair of Trusts & Estates, Gross McGinley, LLP, and a member of LVCF’s Board of Governors, presented The Great Wealth Transfer topic – what it means and the implications for philanthropy.

What is the Great Wealth Transfer?

According to Forbes Magazine, we are facing the greatest wealth transfer ever, with over $60 trillion or more passing from the “Boomer” generation to primarily Gen X and Millennials. At least 10% is expected to benefit charity, an astonishing figure by any measure. The average age of the baby boomer generation is 67 years old and the majority of this generation along with the silent generation have retired or are ready to retire. This group is expected to transfer their remaining wealth over the next 25 to 30 years. Those who work with clients on retirement succession planning are seeing that this transfer is already happening.

Some interesting trends are in the mix. Boomers are asking themselves, how much of my wealth do my children really need? There is not an assumption that the entire estate will be passed on to family. There are also family dynamic issues. Divorce rates for people in the baby boomer generation are much higher now than they were 30 years ago. There is a larger percentage of the adult population now that don’t have children than in the past. According to a 2018 study by the U.S. government, 16.5% of those aged 55 or older do not have children with which to leave their net worth.

What does this mean for philanthropy?

A lot! Estates that are not passed on to spouses, children and other family members are often going to other places like charities or being used to establish charitable vehicles such as donor-advised funds or private foundations for multi-generational philanthropy. There is enormous opportunity for charities to deepen relationships with donors who are planning gifts, sometimes transformational gifts.

Different generations also have a different approach to their philanthropy, so donor engagement approaches and communications must evolve. Lastly, the sense of “place” is more global, with issues beyond our own neighborhoods receiving much attention. Is there an interest, or even a responsibility, to continue supporting issues and nonprofits in your own backyard?

We have been talking a lot about this at LVCF. Philanthropy is often a part of the family conversation about wealth transfer, so what is the Community Foundation doing to support these families, their families, and the nonprofits in our community that benefit from the families generosity?

LVCF’s strategic goal is to support, encourage and educate local philanthropists so they can make a bigger impact and create more partnership with their philanthropic investments (“nurturing place-based philanthropy”). We have created a three-legged stool of supporting those impacted by the Great Wealth Transfer: 1) supporting the individual philanthropist; 2) supporting the professional advisory; and 3) supporting the broader philanthropic community.

- We support individuals and families who want strategic support for grantmaking and family legacy planning through our new products, EverGreen Funds and Impact Services.
- We support professional advisors who have a seat at the table next to their clients, talking about philanthropy, by co-hosting a study group for advisors pursuing the Chartered Advisor in Philanthropy (or CAP) designation. We are co-hosting the inaugural study group right now with Cornerstone Advisors, and Erika is a member of this group.
- We support the broader philanthropic community by being a Founder to, and participating in, a regional Funders’ Network. This Network includes corporate funders, private foundations, and nonprofit funders such as the Community Foundation and United Way. We share best practices for grantmaking and learn more about issues in our backyard.

We hope that our efforts to support families, their advisors, and the broader funder community will encourage the flow of charitable dollars in our region during the Great Wealth Transfer and make a greater impact on the people of the Lehigh Valley.

Tools for Charitable Giving

At the June 2nd Board of Associates meeting, Carrie Krug Nedick, LVCF’s Director of Donor Services, presented New Tools for Charitable Giving. As the Lehigh Valley region experiences growth, both economically and culturally, the Foundation is developing thoughtful philanthropic solutions for families and businesses who want to make a bigger impact.

EverGreen Funds

Our EverGreen Fund is designed as an alternative to a private foundation, with built-in support by way of LVCF resources, expertise, and community knowledge. The Community Foundation acts as paid staff to keep the fund on track and impactful, easing the burden and workload that a private foundation would require.

There are Many Benefits to Opening an EverGreen Fund with LVCF

- Quality staff built in to the fund
- Reduced administrative workload
- Effective and supported grant cycle

Impact Services

Impact Services for grantmaking are included with an EverGreen Fund, but we also offer this as a contracted consulting service. Existing private foundations or independent donors can use this service to make more impactful grants and simplify their grantmaking procedures.

Impact Services includes the use of LVCF’s online grant application portal and can be tailored to the needs of the client. We help to administer an already well-established grant cycle, or we can work from scratch to create a process that brings to life the philanthropic vision of a donor.
